MOONSHINE SCRIBE HAS PERVERTED MIND

Of all the scurrilous attacks upon the purity and flower of the state of Nevada, credit must be given to the moonshine sheet down the street, the Carson Appeal and the Virginia Chronicle.

The insults had been heaped upon our boys and girls through imitations from diseased brains of old and useless members of society, assuming themselves as mouthpieces of public opinion, should not be allowed to pass unnoted, and the editor of the moonshine sheet, on behalf of the parents of Nevada's flowers of life, stands ready and is in a fighting mood to champion the cause of our young people who are pursuing their courses of study in the pride of this state's greatest educational institution, the University of Nevada.

We have scanned the edition of the "Raspberry" which is termed the "unofficial publication of all dissatisfied students of the University of Nevada," which was issued on "Mackay Day," April 15, and fail to see where even a debased mind would take offense.

The old "Raspberry" who class themselves as editorial writers of such publications as the moonshine sheet down the street, the Virginia Chronicle and the Carson Appeal, should be called upon by the fathers and mothers and friends and acquaintances for a public apology, properly signed and attested, wherein they admit they are destructors of reputations and that they long ago outlived their usefulness.

Every citizen of Nevada, with one exception of decency in the blood that courses his or her veins, should take offense at the degrading charges and imputations that these scribbles would endeavor to impress upon the minds of their readers touching upon the flower of this state. If there ever was an institution of learning in the United States where morality is taught and practiced, that institution is the University of Nevada, and the good people of this state should never countenance for one moment, and the debase of purity should be forced into shameful oblivion. Not only have these writers insulted the boy and girl students of the University of Nevada from every town and city in the state, but have cast slurs on our best citizenship, as well as the faculty of the university, which is composed of the most wholesome and cleanly element of minds that was ever assembled together within the walls of any of the higher institutions of learning in America.

After carefully reading the "Raspberry," the editor of the Bonanza cannot find the much advertised vulgarity. The half-tone engravings that are depicted in the pages of the publication, do not border on the obscene. In their frolics the students who edited the "Raspberry" secured photos of some of Mack Sennett's famous beauties, some wearing bathing suits and others vaudeville attire, and by substituting the head of some student at the university, have created a comic that should be received in the same light and spirit that it was developed.

The editorial staff is given names made up out of whole cloth, taken from characters that one encounters in every day life, and there has been no intent to debase the moral atmosphere of the reader. Young people must have their enjoyment when they are of that age where the enthusiasm knows almost unlimited bounds, and if there has been any attempt to overstep the bounds of morality and decency in the publication of the "Raspberry" then we must admit that we belong to a new born school.

The "Raspberry" is simply a burlesque of student life, and the cartoon of which mention was made in the editorial in the moonshine sheet down the street wherein girls of Maxzinta hall were depicted as sprawling around smoking cigarettes, was another kiddish prank, but is no indication that they smoke cigarettes, and should not be taken seriously. In other words it was a burlesque in the purest sense.

God forbid that we may ever see the day when we may be possessed of a perverted brain, such as we have witnessed through reading the editorials of the superannuated editor of the moonshine sheet down the street, and the broken-down writers on the Carson Appeal and Virginia Chronicle. Here at home we have tolerated this nastiness of thought from our God-to-be-pitted scribe, but it would seem that the time had now arrived when tolerance has ceased to be a virtue. He has evidently reached that age of life when he sees no enjoyment in the everyday walks of life. He has developed into a grinch and the hearty laugh of the young people grates on his nerves. He is at a loss to understand why and how the young can secure pleasure from innocent frolics, and would establish rules for their guidance that would take us back to the Puritan days. The collegiate spirit so dear to the life of our boys and girls attending college would be eliminated, the frivolities so essential to the young lives would be restrained, and the happiest days of their existence would be ruined.

Chairs of condemnation should be heaped upon the heads of writers of insulting remarks against our boys and girls. The minds of the scribbles are bordering upon degeneracy, but the parents of our boys and girls of Tonopah who are students at the University of Nevada, and their friends and all lovers of decency, should make it plain that no longer will they tolerate such insults as have been directed by the scribe of the moonshine sheet down the street in its insulting editorial of the 12th instant.

IMMIGRATION RESTRICTION BENEFICIAL TO LABOR

Extension of the present 3 per cent quota immigration restriction law for two years from July 1, 1922, has passed the senate and gone to President Harding for approval. The extension of this act is evidence of the satisfaction which the policy of immigration restriction of this administration has won. Labor is especially gratified at the results of restriction. Statistics show that without this law unemployment during the past year would have been tremendously increased by the arrival of hundreds of thousands of immigrants. Representative Albert Johnson, chairman of the house immigration committee, recently declared on the floor of the house: "In my opinion this percentage has kept from the United States 600,000 or 700,000 aliens to date, and will by July 1 next have kept out 1,750,000 or 2,000,000." What such an immigration would have meant during the acute days of the past winter is well realized by the jobless man. It would have been the last straw.

That the immigration peril from which we have been spared is not fictional is evidenced by the testimony of many American observers who have recently returned from European ports. Perhaps the most conspicuous of these is Lillian Russell, in private life Mrs. Alexander P. Moore, of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Moore was commissioned by President Harding and Secretary of Labor Davis to visit Europe and make a personal investigation of the immigration problem. She returns to report that the situation is even worse than believed. Incredible poverty, epidemic disease, pauperized living standards joined to what amounts to a "mass impulse" to escape the conditions in Europe by migration to America—such was the general impression which Mrs. Moore caught in her tour to European countries.

In her report, which was filed with Secretary Davis, Mrs. Moore recommended that the sifting of prospective immigrants be carried on abroad instead of at Ellis Island. She urged that American consuls be empowered to refuse visas to all unfit applicants. As a preliminary all prospective emigrants from Europe to this country should be required to file with the United States consular offices a full health and industrial statement, which will enable the consuls to exercise full judgment as to the applicant's possibilities as a future citizen. In another portion of her report, Mrs. Moore recommended the suspension of immigration by an "immigration holiday" of five years. Her testimony before the senate committee did much to induce the extension of restriction which has just been voted.

Those internationalists who complain that the United States is not doing enough to help in the restoration of Europe should at least admit that we set a good example in reduction of military expenditures—an example which some of them refuse to follow, although owing us a lot of money they say they can not pay.

Their Beauty Brings Them Fortunes

Child innocence and child beauty are admired everywhere, be it in home or movie. These four little beauties have just left their home to pose before the camera for French movie fans. They have been declared the four most beautiful children in Europe and the highest salaried. Upper left is Claude Albert, who won a $25,000 contest as the most beautiful child. Upper right, Lina LeLong; lower left, La Petite Louise and lower right, Rebe Lilienne.

FINANCIAL LEADER WANTED

In all world history there has never been a greater demand in any field for enterprise than now exists in the financial world for a leader able to develop and forceful enough to make effective a plan looking to the stabilization of world finance. Gold is still the basis of our monetary system. There is more gold in the world today than ever before in history. There is enough gold in the world, if properly utilized, to stabilize world credit. It is generally recognized that this country must lead the way. That our increased gold reserves must furnish the basis of credit in foreign nations with which we desire to do business and which, excluding their internal debts, are able to pay for goods which they need and which we greatly need to sell. This situation is recognized by the treasury of the United States. Comptroller Crissinger in a recent address delivered in New York stated: "It is the duty of the United States to take the leadership in bringing the world back to a gold standard because this country has become the monopolist of the world's monetary gold."

"With about 7 per cent of the world's population, this country holds some 40 per cent of the world's gold stock. We have literally more gold than we have proper use for; more gold than it is good for us to have. It is vastly better that we should, through carefully devised measures, calculated to conserve every interest involved, begin the redistribution of this gold about the world so that it will be restored to its proper function of maintaining a sound relationship between currency systems and the metallic standards."

"If we do not do this in time, the inevitable operation of economic law will sooner or later begin to do it in spite of us, and perhaps in circumstances and by methods that will result in unfortunate consequences. Now is the time to begin preparation."

for this redistribution and, for the restoration of money systems. As the custodian, I might say the trustee, of the greatest stock of gold that ever came into the possession of one country, our duty both to ourselves and to the world at large demands that we take the lead in developing procedures by which this gold basis of a sound currency system may be made available to the service of the entire business world.

Where is the financial leader who will do more than theorize upon this subject, says Mining Congress Journal. A number of plans have been considered by the public. Each in turn has been perforated with criticism, but, so far as we know, no one has undertaken to frame a proposal having regard to the intelligent criticisms which were aimed at previous proposals. With the surplus of gold which this country now possesses it is certainly, as Mr. Crissinger says, "the duty of the United States to take the leadership in bringing the world to monetary standard."

World fame awaits the leader who can develop and make effective a solution of this all important problem. A conference of those who realize the importance of this problem should be brought together for the purpose of discussing these issues.
